

Privacy

We have created this privacy statement in order to demonstrate our practice's commitment to privacy. The following discloses our information gathering and dissemination practices for this Web site: www.bittarmd.com.

The information we receive depends upon what you do when visiting our Web site.

If you visit our site to read or download information, such as articles or brochures:

We collect and store only the information about you: the name of the domain from which you access the Internet (for example, aol.com, if you are connecting from an American Online account, or Princeton.edu if you are connecting from Princeton University's domain); the date and time you access our site; and the Internet address of the Web site from which you linked directly to our site.

We use the information we collect to measure the number of visitors to the different sections of our site, and to help us make our site more useful to you and other visitors.

If you identify yourself by sending an E-mail:

You may also decide to send us personally identifying information, for example an electronic mail message containing a question. In addition, the forms on our site require users to give us confidential information, unique identifiers, and demographic information. This information is used only for the internal purpose of serving our patients' needs better. This information is not shared with any other organization(s) without your explicit written request. This site maintains security measures intended to protect the loss, misuse and alteration of the information under our control. We want to be very clear: We will not obtain personally identifying information about you when you visit our site, unless you choose to provide such information to us.

WARNING: This site contains links to other sites. www.bittarmd.com is not responsible for the privacy practices or the content of such Web sites.
